INVESTMENT STRATEGY

A strategy for investing in fixed-income instruments that aims to achieve returns above those typically associated with fixed-income investment products. This is achieved by selecting debt securities or equivalent investment objects, usually collective investment undertakings. Most of the assets are invested in the Nordic region (Denmark, Norway, Finland, Sweden) corporate bonds that have a credit rating below investment grade. Proportion of alternative investments can represent up to 30% of the assets. Derivatives can be used to hedge against currency exchange rate change risk.

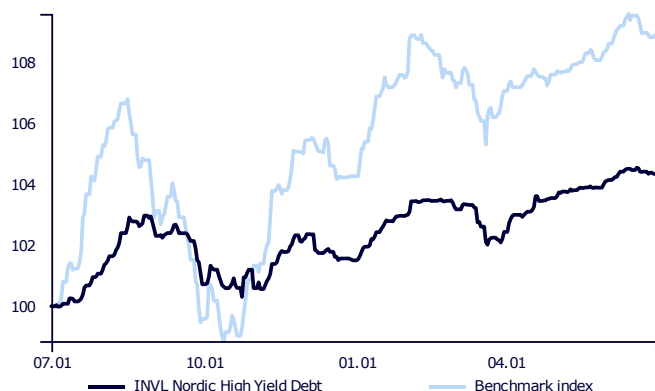

COMMENT

Central banks in both Europe and the US have continued to signal that their fight against inflation may not yet be over, so interest rates will have to stay high for longer. Moreover, the head of the US Federal Reserve announced that even if it decided not to raise interest rates temporarily, this would not mean a peak in rate hikes, and that the central bank would retain the option of continuing to raise rates after the pause, should such a move become necessary. For its part, the European Central Bank (ECB) has continued to send the message that interest rates will be raised as inflation remains well above its 2% target.

In bond markets, fears of uncertainty in the financial system in mid-spring, when several regional US banks and the Swiss giant Credit Suisse went bust, led to capital flowing into the lowest-risk bonds, pushing their prices up. Moreover, as the big banks still offered low interest rates on deposits compared to short-term bonds, savers started to withdraw their capital from bank accounts and invest it in money market funds. This further exacerbated the appreciation of the safest bonds. However, in the second half of the spring, market expectations normalized somewhat, and bond yields started to converge towards the rhetoric signaled by the central banks, so that the further rise in most indices stalled. We see the current situation in the bond market as an attractive acquisition opportunity, as low-risk bonds show attractive expected returns - for example, Lithuanian government bonds of various maturities offer yields of around 4%.

The assets of the investment basket are invested in short-duration bonds in the Scandinavian region, by allocating the assets to professional third-party investment funds, thus diversifying the portfolio across different managers, countries, sectors and achieving fewer volatile returns. The value of the investment basket unit rose by 2.8%, slightly underperforming the return of the benchmark, but it is worth noting that the investment basket's assets are invested in less risky bonds (less exposed to changes in interest rates), and therefore the fluctuations in value have been more modest.
